VAIN HUNT FOR 8 YEARS

Mrs. Henson Hunt for Something to Help Her During Eight Years, But Found Nothing Until She Began to Take Cardui.

Purcell, Okla.—Mrs. May Henson, of this place, says: "For nearly eight years I suffered from womanly troubles, and could not find anything that did me any good."

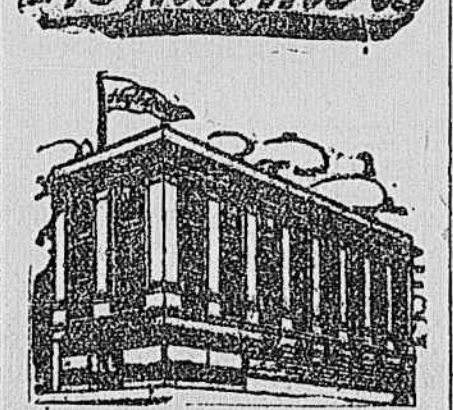

"I had such pains I could not do my work, and I could hardly even lie down. I tried different doctors, but got worse all the time. I was told by several to take Cardui, and I decided to give it a trial. The very first bottle helped me, and by the time I had taken five bottles, I was well and could do my own work."

"I think every suffering woman should take Cardui. Any one who doubts that it will cure should try it, as I did, and they will never doubt it again."

"As a remedy for women's ills Cardui has no equal. For more than 50 years, commencing before most of the readers of this paper were born, Cardui has been helping sick women back to health and strength."

"If you are weak, tired, worn-out, or suffer from any of the pains peculiar to women, or from irregularity, we urge you to give Cardui a fair trial. Begin to-day. Your druggist sells it."

NOTE.—The Cardui Home Treatment for Women consists of Cardui ($1), Thedford's Black-Draught (25c), or Vello (50c), for the liver, and Cardui Antiseptic (50c). These remedies may be taken singly, by themselves, if desired, or three together, as a complete treatment for women's ills. LIBERIA VIEWS CLEAR HORIZON

Financial Cloud Lifted and Obstacles to Loan Removed.

Monrovia, Liberia, Thursday, February 18.—It now seems practically certain that Liberia has been saved. The financial cloud which recently hung so threateningly over her has been lifted at last, and a clear horizon can be viewed.

The visit of Roland P. Falkner, financial representative of Liberia, to Monrovia during the recent session of the Legislature, served to bring about this agreeable condition. He remained only twenty-four days, yet in that space of time he cleared up all the local obstacles which were in the way of obtaining the much-needed loan.

There were three main barriers to the proposed loan—the adjustment of the Kanre Lahun question with England, the ratification of the boundary delimitation treaty with France, and the reform of the judicial system of Liberia. To settle these questions was the ostensible purpose of the visit of Mr. Falkner. The first and second were absolutely necessary to obtain the consent of England and France to their co-operation in the readjustment of the finances of Liberia. Judicial reforms were necessary to guarantee the safety and security of capital invested in the country.

There had been strong opposition to the yielding of the Kanre Lahun district to England, and the ratification of the new boundary with France, and the legislators were afraid to consent to either, particularly on account of the approaching elections. They were loath to render the dissatisfaction of the popular vote by passing the unpopular act transferring this territory to England. The delay in ratifying the boundary agreement with France, and the ground that it was an unjust usurpation on the part of that government.

At a luncheon given by President Barclay, at which many Senators and Representatives were present, Mr. Falkner took occasion to drive home some plain and unpalatable truths regarding the Liberian situation. He made special reference to the credit of Liberia in the money markets of the world. The credit was zero, and would remain zero if the Legislature did not at once settle these three threatening questions. Should they be left open, he could not guarantee any loan, as the bankers would in no circumstances consider refunding Liberia's debt.

There was no further hesitation on the part of the Legislature, as there was no other alternative for Liberia should the proposed loan fail. The delimitation treaty was signed, and Kanre Lahun passed under the fold of the British flag. In consideration of $20,000, and a strip of territory about as large as Kanre Lahun itself, situated on the southeast of this territory, the Liberian situation was cleared up. The ratification of the boundary treaty was also secured. The loss is estimated at $3,500, with but little insurance. The entire fire department responded to the alarm and prevented the factory of the company from being destroyed.

Quantity of Stores Destroyed. Kingston, Jamaica, March 12.—The fire which broke out in the dockyard at Port Royal yesterday, was got under control last night. The principal buildings and the machine shops were saved, but large quantities of stores were destroyed. The military has been in charge of the establishment since it was closed as a dock yard, five years ago.

Church to Be Remodeled. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Alexandria, Va., March 12.—The First Baptist Church is being completely remodeled. The work will require several months. During the progress of the work, the congregation of that church is holding services at the opera house.

Wed After Many Difficulties and Are Forgiven—No Trace of Incendiaries.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Winchester, Va., March 12.—Benjamin Breeden and his cousin, Miss Maud Breeden, aged seventeen and eighteen years, respectively, of the mountain section of Rockingham county, were married a few days ago in Hagerstown, but not until they had encountered difficulties sufficient to discourage any extent such as at a determined and long-suffering nature. Breeden enlisted the services of Miller Davis, of Elkton, to assist him in his mission across the mountains, and the start was made late at night. Miss Breeden was in waiting, and as the carriage drove up she came out of a clump of bushes, where she had been hiding, and was lifted into the surrey, which was driven off at a rapid gallop, so rapid, in fact, that one of the wheels broke off, rendering the vehicle under for further service that night. The balance of the journey was made over rough and rugged roads on horseback to Shenandoah, which was reached in the cold, gray dawn, and just in time to board the early train for Hagerstown. It was the first time that the bride had ever experienced a ride on a railroad train, and the swaying to and fro of the coach made her sick. With brave heart, however, she made the best of it, and as soon as a Hagerstown minister told the knot the young couple lost no time getting back home. They were tired and sleepy from their strenuous experience, and they have since been forgiven by the folks at home.

The Frederick county Democratic executive committee held a meeting at the courthouse here yesterday afternoon and decided to hold the primary on Tuesday, June 13. A resolution was adopted to the effect that all persons qualified to vote at the November election are invited to participate in the primary, provided they bind themselves to support the nominees. B. C. Shull was re-elected chairman.

Thus far the authorities of Rockingham and Shenandoah counties have been unable to run down the gang of incendiaries who have been burning barns and other outbuildings in those counties during the past two weeks. A number of the buildings have been burned, and everything points to incendiarism.

The Winchester and Frederick County Business Men's Association, with S. L. Lupton as president, was organized yesterday night by a large number of the leading men of the city and county. It being the object of the association to place the natural resources and commercial advantages of the city and county before the people of other sections in an attractive manner.

The old Episcopal Female Institute property, which was the headquarters of General Phil Sheridan during the Civil War while he was in Winchester, was sold by the owners several days ago to A. B. Richards, of Frederick county.

Members of the Winchester Municipal Association appeared before the Common Council the other night and urged that no amendment be enacted to the Sunday law regarding the sale of tobacco on Saturday night, and that other people could also do so. The council took the same view, and directed the police to enforce the law as it now stands on the statute books.

Calvin N. Roberts, employed as night fireman at the Baker Lime Works, near Funder Hill, was found dead in the furnace room yesterday night, his death resulting from a sudden attack of heart disease. He was forty-one years old and leaves a large family connection.

The stables, which were in the rear part of the stable were saved. In addition, the furnace room, together with the machinery, was also destroyed. The loss is estimated at $3,500, with but little insurance. The entire fire department responded to the alarm and prevented the factory of the company from being destroyed.

BURIED MINERS NOT YET REACHED

Officials Bend Every Effort to Expedite Work of Rescue. Ten Bodies Recovered.

Duluth, Minn., March 12.—Ten bodies crushed almost into an unrecognizable mass have been taken from the Norman open-pit mine at Virginia, Minn., where a cave-in occurred Saturday evening, burying twenty-six miners. Sixteen bodies have not been reached, but the mine officials are bending every effort to expedite the work of rescue. A large force of men is working vigorously, but it is not believed any of the men will be taken out alive.

To hasten the work, additional "clams" have been sent for, and these, capable of lifting many tons of ore, will, it is thought, bring to light the missing bodies before many hours elapse. The ten bodies recovered lie at a morgue, which has been besieged all day by relatives, children and relatives of the men. The scenes of agony and distress are such as to affect the stoutest heart. The cause has been instantaneous death, as it is said, to the thaws of the last few days suddenly loosening boulders and earth, and causing the men to slide toward the bottom of the pit.

A cordon of guards is stationed about the works to prevent entrance of those who are not identified with the plant, and the only information obtainable is that which is gathered from the mine. It was asserted by some to-night that it may require two days before all of the bodies are recovered.
